Dairy Farm - Technology - Milking parlour

The milking parlour holds 28 cows at a time. The cows know it's time to be milked as their udders are full. Each cow get some food as it's being milked. Like the calves the cows wear collars which are linked to a computer, this controls the amount of food given. The udders are cleaned and the milking cluster is attached. Milk is gently removed from the udder and stored in a large tank
